

MATRIX MANAGEMENT

OVERVIEW

Matrix management is becoming a common structure for many organisations today. It's a flexible approach to organising and managing teams and provides many opportunities to better share resources and skills within a business. It's a collaborative approach that can increase engagement, provide career opportunities for employees, and deliver new and exciting ways of working.

A matrix style of management is not without its dangers though and some of the early implementations highlighted risks that businesses have learned to avoid with some adaptation of the original approach. Matrix Management 2.0 has consequently become the more usual framework.

This Matrix Management e-learning course sets out to provide learners with a thorough understanding of this approach to organisational structure. It looks at the theory behind the concept and then expands into the nuts and bolts of making it work within your organisation.

OBJECTIVES

- Understand organisational structures and why a business might benefit from a matrix management structure
- Identify why different structures fail and how to avoid any pitfalls
- Implement Matrix Management 2.0 and the business processes behind it
- Appreciate the benefits of a matrix management approach on employees and the organisation
- Establish how collaborative management can work for your organisation
- Follow a clear process for implementing matrix management
- Explore a case study to better understand issues and concerns

DURATION

1 hour. Including interactions and videos.

AUDIENCE

This course is suitable for the leaders within your business and will help anyone who is involved in the collaboration of employees and teams.

CERTIFICATION

Upon completion of the course the learner will receive a CPD certificate.

